8:00-9:00 Money Laundering

- Thomas Krepp, Chief of the Data Analytics Unit, Criminal Division, US Department of Justice for the Northern District of Georgia, will discuss how money laundering is on the rise. The Panama and Paradise Papers and recent criminal prosecutions show us that lawyers can be used, innocently or otherwise, to facilitate their client’s criminal activity. Lawyer disciplinary authorities are facing pressure from Congress and international groups to do more to prevent this conduct. What do money laundering cases look like, and how should Bar investigators handle them? This program will highlight investigative techniques for cases in which a lawyer’s failure to conduct client due diligence resulted in client money laundering. Ms. Fredrick will also discuss current developments and anti-money laundering initiatives domestically and globally, and address possible approaches to further limit the risk to lawyers when clients seek to use their services for nefarious purposes.

10:15-11:45 Trust Accounting Auditing and Financial Analysis (Panel Discussion, Continued)

11:45-1:00 Lunch, OBI Hosted

1:00-3:00 Attorney Wellness

- Brian Cuban, Texas attorney, author & addiction recovery advocate and the younger brother of Mavericks’ owner, Mark Cuban, has been in long term recovery from alcohol, cocaine and bulimia since 2007. Mr. Cuban will share his personal story of how addiction affected his ability to practice law and his recovery. Brian will also share his insight on how the attorney disciplinary system may better serve those legal professionals who struggle with mental health and/or addiction issues.

3:00-3:15 Break

3:15-4:00 Attorney Wellness, Continued

- Wolanda Shelton, Assistant General Counsel, State Bar of Georgia, will present, “Lawyer Well-Being: It Takes A Village.” The legal profession is increasingly competitive and stressful. Studies show that substance use, addiction and mental disorders - including depression and thoughts of suicide - often unrecognized, are occurring at shockingly high rates. Lawyer well-being must be prioritized in order to build a more sustainable profession. Bar investigators, like all sectors of the legal community, can contribute to improving attorney wellness with knowledge of the following topics:

Current trends among lawyers related to substance use, addiction and mental health issues;
Self-referrals and lawyer discipline;
Disciplinary actions: the role of substance abuse, addictions and mental disorders;
Licensure Reinstatements: surviving disciplinary action; and
Work culture and the commitment to well-being issues.

4:00-5:00 Character and Fitness

- Elizabeth Stone, Assistant Director, Supreme Court of Georgia Office of Bar Admissions, will discuss the character and fitness investigation that is required of all law school graduates seeking to become licensed as attorneys. She will focus on the components of the investigation, tools used by investigators, and the manner in which information is shared with other jurisdictions. Additionally, she will address the specific issues in an application that may trigger a more in-depth investigation, the avenues the investigation can take when a concern is discovered, and the potential outcomes for an applicant in problematic cases. Also addressed will be the route back to bar membership for those who have been disbarred or who surrendered their license in the past.
